BANDIT LEADER REGAINS LIBERTY

Lockhart, Oklahoma, Terror, In Sensational Break

FRIENDS CLUB JAILER

Notorious Bandit Killer Flees To Osage Hills

By United Press

GROVE, Okla., Oct. 3.—Ed Lockhart, notorious desperado, gained his liberty today in one of the most daring breaks in Oklahoma's history.

Lockhart, arrested last week and lodged in jail at Jay, Okla., obtained his freedom when three men drove up in front of the jail in an automobile and beat Jailer Jack Carey over the head with bats of heavy revolver until he agreed to release the outlaw.

The prisoner, with his pals, sped out of the city to the security of hiding places in the Osage hills.

Poses led by Sheriff Smith scoured the hills searching for the bandit gang.

Paroled by Walton.

Lockhart, a protégé of Al Spencer, who was shot to death three weeks ago, has a long career as bank robber and outlaw. Al Spencer's death became head of the gang which for five years has operated along the Oklahoma-Kansas and Oklahoma-Arkansas line, holding up banks, trains and passengers.

While under a 20-year sentence for robbing a bank, Lockhart was paroled in August by Governor J. C. Walton. Two days later the parole was revoked. Lockhart was located by Sheriff Smith on the Baker farm near Jay. He was arrested with three companions, all heavily armed.

Rewards of more than $20,000 had been offered for Lockhart's arrest.

Lockhart's escape.

A youth walked into the office of Jack Carey, jailer, taking him by surprise. Perry Arthur, Jay, Okla., merchant, was talking with him at the time. The youth pulled a gun on the two and forced Carey to put his gun on the table.

Another member of the outlaw gang stepped up and took possession of it.

With two pistols, one on each man, the youth demanded that Lockhart's cell be unlocked. Carey followed the instructions and when Lockhart was released, he and Arthur were ordered into the cell vacated by Lockhart.

Other prisoners confined in the jail refused the opportunity to escape.

Wife of Another Slays Greek Catholic Pastor

WORSHIPERS IN PANIC

Policeman Rescues Assailant From Crowds

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Alienists today examined Mrs. Emma Strutytsky, attractive matron who yesterday shot and killed the Rev. Basil Stetusk in the church of the Archangel here.

The Church of St. Michael the Archangel, a Greek Catholic church, worshippers scattered through the church when aroused from their meditations and was thrown into a panic as the Sabbath quiet was shattered by the crash of revolver shots and the shrill maledictions of the woman.

Motive Not Known.

Police were unable to determine the reason for the crime, although the woman, in a confession of the killing, charged the priest with squandering the church's money and leading the people from the "path of true religion." Officials are trying to determine whether the indictments of the woman's husband, also a priest, in connection with the embezzlement of funds for constructing the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, had anything to do with the affair.

Mrs. Strutytsky, who is 42, is the wife of Rev. Nicholas Strutytsky, former pastor of the church and now pastor of the Church of St. John the Baptist, in Ramsey, Pa. In her confession, the woman said the revolver had been given her by Father Valentine Belong of Youngstown, Ohio, "for my own protection," police are checking this claim.

The priestly in the tragedy are Ukrainians.

Under Planned.

Five weeks ago the woman came here with the sole idea of killing the priest, she told police. For days, she shadowed her victim, several times on the verge of using her revolver, but each time she withheld her fire for fear of failure, she said.

Saturday she decided on the church as the theatre of action and the Sabbath as the time, she said. Men and (Turn to Page 2 Column 1)

FINGERS HERE HAND OF DEATH

Clutched Ace, Deuce, Trey of Diamonds, 5 of Spades

$200 MISSING

Girl's Head Crushed in With Granite Block

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 3.—Lorenzo Savage, negro "voodoo doctor," confessed early today, according to the police, to the murder of Elsie Barthel, 28, a pretty nurse.

Miss Barthel was slain Saturday night. Her body was found under a portion of a deserted mansion of the Woodfield district, the head crushed almost beyond recognition by a huge granite block weighing 75 pounds.

In one hand Miss Barthel clutched an envelope containing the hand of death—the ace, deuce, Trey of diamonds and the five of spades. In the other hand was an empty envelope in which the nurse had placed $200 before leaving her home Saturday night.

Savage, according to his relatives, she planned to pay to Savage for alleged love charms and spells. Savage was employed as a butler by Dr. R. B. Marshall, for whom Miss Barthel worked as a nurse.

Savage confessed, police said, to striking the girl a terrific blow in the face when she changed her mind and declined to pay him the money. This led him to murder the girl, according to his confession.

Owing to Savage's supposed "spiritual connection" with the pretty nurse, the negro was suspected from the start. He was arrested last night and after hours of grilling confessed to slaying the young woman to the deserted mansion.

Savage then admitted, according to police, that after telling the girl to the ground he picked up the granite stone and dropped it on her head. Not satisfied with this, Savage said he buried bricks at the lifeless form.

Chatterbox Held

In Savage's lodgings, where he lived with his wife, police found a deck of cards with the ace, deuce and Trey of diamonds and the five of spades missing.

A handkerchief found near the girl's body also belonged to Savage, police said.

The negro's wife and Walter Hauley, a chauffeur, who said he had been a close friend of the nurse for several years, are being held by police as material witnesses.

The parents and employer of the murdered nurse came forward today to defend her character against suggestions that she was involved in a voodoo cult of any sort.

It was established at a coroner's inquest that Miss Barthel was about to become a mother.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Loring Ranger offers a reward of a hundred thousand dollars for the return of his missing daughter, Hope. He receives a communication from Hope's abductors telling him where to deposit a hundred thousand dollars north of bonds. Ranger acts accordingly to instructions.
Justice Charlie, adventurer, is a warm friend of Loring's and he follows a clue to Hope's whereabouts which is furnished by a girl friend.
Hope is held prisoner in Dr. Bristow's sanitarium where she makes friends with Dr. Kelsey, another prisoner. They escape in Bristow's car, but is wrecked and the two take refuge in an abandoned house. Bristow traces them there and while Kelsey sleeps Hope surrenders to Bristow.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
The storm was lessening in violence, and Hope propped herself up on her pillows, determined to listen for any indications that might betoken Bristow's return.
But although she was not conscious of physical fatigue, she was mentally and emotionally exhausted, and before she knew it she slept.
When she awoke the next morning, a heavy gale was blowing from the sea, and the rain was coming down steadily.
Somewhere in this chain of circumstances which bound her, there must be a weak link.
But what was it? She was one, in a fixed place, this room; the others were three, and moved about at will—three acting in concert. Acting in concert! With the repetition of the words, a thrill ran over her from head to foot, and there came a flash of illumination.
If that unity, that close concord could be broken, if they got to arguing and disagreeing among themselves, it would inevitably mean postponement of action.
She looked at the little clock on the dressing-table. It was growing late. Miss Copley would be in at any moment now. She must dress and be ready for her.
She was just putting the finishing touches to her toilet when the nurse entered with the breakfast tray.
As Anita saw Hope standing there fully dressed, she halted so abruptly that the dishes rattled on the tray. She put it down hastily, and looked at her patient with unconcerned amazement.
"You're not usually so spry," she said sourly. "What did you fix your hair that way for?"
Hope affected astonishment at the question.
"Why, I always do it this way," Anita recoiled, but seemed unable to take her eyes off the girl.
"Eat your breakfast," she said impatiently, and walking over to the window stood with her back to Hope, looking out on the rain-soaked grounds, biting her raw lip in absorbed cogitation.
Finally she turned, as Hope was finishing her coffee.
"I'll get your pencil and paper for you," Hope objected, pushing out her hands pettishly.
"I never want to see them again," she said. "What would I do with pencil and paper? I have no one to write to."
Miss Copley gave her another long look, a peculiarly sinister one this time, and left the room.
A little later, Dr. Bristow knocked, unlocked the door, and came in. He was talking and drumming with his index fingers on the wall, but he had not time glad to get home. On... lowering her voice, and looking apprehensively toward the door, "she was cross. I don't like her. I hate her. Why don't you send her away, and let me stay with you?"

She came nearer, cooing, entreating, her lips adorably pouted.
"You're so wise and kind. I like to be with you. I like to look at you. You wear such beautiful clothes."
She stroked the sleeve of his coat, as if its touch gave her a luxurious pleasure.
"And your neckties! That's the loveliest black pearl I ever saw." She touched it with her tongue, and bent closer, so near him that her hair brushed his cheek.
A glorious creature! Bristow's breath came a little faster. Young, lovely, rich. How could he have been so blind, so obtuse to the possibilities of the situation?
And at this moment, Anita Copley chose to return to the room.
She stood inside the door, glistening from one to the other, varying emotions depicted on her face. Surprise, astonishment deepening to comprehension, and then jealous anger.
Hope laughed gaily and clung to his hand. He smilingly released himself and left, without another glance at Anita.
"You're in love with him," the girl's face was selfishly acute, as she taunted her jealous rival. She knew that she was going beyond the danger line, but she took that risk. The further she could lead Anita the better. "And he doesn't care that for you?" She brought her fingers together and then opened them, blowing off an imaginary speck. "He likes me! He likes me!"
She made an unexpected rush, and propelled Anita toward the mirror.
"Look at us! Look!" her chin on the woman's shoulder.
Anita stood trance-like for an instant, enthralled by the two faces so like and yet so different, with all the terrible difference in Hope's favor.
And then before the younger woman could realize her purpose, she whirled. There was one stinging blow on the cheek that sent Hope staggering. Others, a rain of them, followed.
"Now, you crazy loon!" in a gasping, throatlike snarl. "Keep still, or I'll give you worse. Keep still, I tell you!" as Hope crouched and whimpered. "I'll see about this! I'll see about this!" She rushed from the room. Hope gasped her bruised cheek, and smiled.

CHAPTER XXIV
Hobo Bill sat in what he called the "parlor" of his suite in the sanitarium, an old man in a worn, velvet dressing gown.
At ten minutes after five, Bristow and Anita Copley came in together.
Anita, suppressed hysteria showed under Anita's efforts at composure. Higgins gazed at them through his heavy-lidded spectacles.
"You're late," he croaked coldly. To his valet he gave a curt order: "Get out."
"Hurry," Bristow said, "but I had to wait for that porter, Morton. He very seldom leaves the place, but today of all days he chose to depart on some errand of his own, and still" over two hours. The time passed excitingly, though, Anita, contemplating "how fit to become temperamental."

"Humph!" the old man grunted uncontentedly. "You damn fools don't understand that this is no time for child's play. We're in a bad fix, I tell you. A damn bad fix."
"I don't see it," Bristow said coolly. "We've got the girl, and Kelsey's very happily grounded."
"And our hundred thousand in Liberty bonds along with him," mumbled the old man wryly.
"We'll get that back," Bristow spoke with consistent confidence. "The moment the body's recovered, I'll hear of it and be on the spot. Don't think that any life guard or claim digger can get away with that envelope. If I can't manage to lay hands on it myself, I'll see that it's turned over to the Coroner. I've already informed him that Kelsey robbed my safe when he made the attack on me."

YOU AND FORD

It took Henry Ford twelve years to sell his first million cars. It took him only six months to sell his eighth million.

Here you have a clear-cut illustration of a principle that regulates success in nearly every field of endeavor. It is no universal principle that it is almost a natural law.

This is the principle: Getting started is nine-tenths of the battle for success. Once we are "on our feet"—definitely progressing toward our goal—our progress increasingly becomes easier.

Every self-made rich man, looking back over his career, knows that it is more difficult to accumulate the first $1000 than any $10,000 that follows. Hence, the expression: "Money breeds money."

The fastest locomotive has a lot of preliminary work, devoted to mechanical tests, inspection and getting up steam, during which period the locomotive doesn't travel at all. It stands still until ready to make its fast run to destination.

The championship prize fight lasts only a matter of minutes. But it is won or lost in the years of training beforehand.

It took the allied armies more than four years to develop the strength and momentum for the comparatively short campaign that knocked out Germany. At many times during those long years, and right up to within a few months of the German surrender, it looked as if the allied preliminary work had been largely wasted. But it wasn't wasted. The tables were turned, and success came, virtually overnight.

Once you get an army on the run, victory comes fast. So does success, after we get firmly on our feet.

After the seeds sprout in the garden, comes a period in which the outlook seems almost hopeless except to the experienced gardener. The fight against weeds and outcrops and insects is a neck-and-neck contest. And then, almost overnight, the garden wins the fight. Thereafter it requires comparatively little care. The harvest is won or lost in the discouraging period early in the game.

Why, then, ever allow ourselves to become discouraged, no matter what we are attempting or how great our setbacks?

Night is blackest just before the dawn. And the average career is bluest just before we win.

Most of us are nearer success than we realize. Success may even be right around the corner. Trouble is, the majority of people get discouraged and slow down their efforts at the critical moment when they are on the verge of "getting across."

The leaders of men are the ones who hang on in the crisis when the others lose heart and let go.

Lace Frocks Vogue Continues In Favor For Early Fall Wear

LACE, so far this season, is a more pronounced vogue for afternoon costumes than for any other type, and it is most often combined with satin. A great deal of it is used in the beige and ecru shades, with two-toned styles well liked. Often the bodice section is entirely of lace, worked into a satin band, while the skirt alternates bands of silk and lace in twelve to sixteen inch widths. With these go little cape-like sleeves, also of lace.

For black Chantilly, it looks as if an old fashion were to be revived for designers are showing many black lace frocks made over a foundation of color. Unlike the old fashion, however, the foundations favor pale shades, pink and ecru, for instance, and make the idea is exploited particularly for misses' dance frocks developed in beautiful styles.

Metal frocks find their place on formal occasions for evening and dinner, and are very often combined with velvet. On these the lace makes flourishes of one sort or another, or side drapes. A rather unusual idea is the gathering of the material into a "lighter" flounce of lace, flaring out at the bottom. The cape of lace also appears on formal evening costumes, studded with jewels and permitting the richest and most elaborate of effects.

Silks for fall always seem to have a bit more "shine." And this year is no exception. Lots of satin-finish crepe. And also lots of broad-lace crepe on satin and tulle on crepe, used in linings, afternoon frocks, and the waist sections of the popular three-piece suits. These three-piece suits also give a good chance to use a new heavy printed silk called Roman crepe which comes in gay patterns taken from Italian, Norwegian and Scandinavian sources.

Wool and silk crepes are more used than ever, and you can get them broadened this year. The popular Roman crepe comes bordered in a sort of plush or chenille, and is stunning in gray or ecru color for afternoon dresses. And other striking novelties are the fiber-embroidered wool and silk crepes and the cut-velvet or chenille effects on sheer backgrounds.

Velvet in dark colors will also be a favorite for afternoon gowns. And among the plain laces, flat crepes, crepe satins and failles are no longer rooted in our affections that they can't be budgeted. More is a possibility—though it's a happier choice in light evening shades.

There is a new fabric—butterfly voile (pretty name, isn't it?), for evening wear. It is demure, ingenuously sort of material, the sheers of voile with a fine, silky, imitation chenille forming narrow ridges and tiny squares all over it. Comes in a rich shade of golden brown, as well as the pastel shades—lavender, rose, orchid and an exotic yellowish-orange. For feet for evening gowns for the youthful. The beaded gown, friend of the fall, seems to glitters again in fashion's favor for evening.

WIFE FALSIFIED AGE HE AVERS IN SUIT

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 8.—The man who said "they are only as old as they look," was all wrong, Edward H. Forey says he will prove it. On April 11, 1929, he married Lillie Aldrich, and it took him more than three years to discover that she was 47 years old. Instead of 32, as she claimed when he married her.

He claims to have learned the deception only on August 6, last. Now he wants an annulment on the ground of fraud.
